Foot Basins

Hot and Cold Foot baths

The application of hot and cold foot baths was already rediscovered and promoted by Father Sebastian Kneipp (1821-1897) for issues with cold feet and blood circulatory disorders. The feet would be bathed alternatively in hot and cold water. This process would be repeated 2-3 times and would always end with the cold bath.

These foot baths act as a prophylaxis for cardiovascular disorders and strengthen the immune system.

Kneipp's foot baths should therefore be included as an important component of every sauna spa area.

Foot baths often act as the main focus in many spa areas and are held in great esteem by the guests, especially women. You can sit on the ergonomically shaped, heat storing loungers and feel wonderfully relaxed whilst your feet enjoy the normally warm water allowing you to have a good time.

Variations of Foot baths

At Weise and Partner, we design an individual foot bath and then install it so that it is perfectly integrated in your spa area.

For example, a great focal point would be a spacious and inviting heated bench of ergonomically shaped ceramics, with the matching ceramic foot basin from Sommerhuber. There are 18 different types of glazes to choose from.

According to execution and design, the bench can be covered with many different materials. From porcelain stoneware to natural stone, wood or imitation leather, creativity has no limits.

There are also numerous scopes for design when it comes to the foot basins themselves. They can be freestanding or integrated, or be a single basin or a long one. They can have pleasantly warm water flowing through it, or can use Kneipp's method of having multiple basins next to each other and changing between warm and cold water. We create unique footbaths, according to your requirements and concepts.
